As Christmas is just around the corner, here's an easy way to get your family and friends into the festive spirit! Whenever someone approaches a Christmas tree, this device is programmed to play your favorite Christmas songs. Everyone will rockin' around the Christmas tree at the right time! Note: This device can also act as a baby monitor if you have a little munchkin in the house. Often our tiny people see the light and want to pick up the decorations right? With this device, you will know if they get too close to the tree. The crisis is averted! Not too many supplies needed to do this are instructable. You need: LinkIT ONE MediaTek Speaker Of the Grove Motion Board sensorUpload MP3 version of all your favorite Christmas music to play on que when the device is activated. We're going to store MP3 files in LinkIt One flash memory. To do this, incorporate the MS/UART switch into Mass Storage or MS mode. Now you can just drag and drop MP3 song files in LinkIt One Flash storage. . Once this is done, turn the MS/UART switch back into UART mode to download your code. Now it's time to set your code! Many of these features are already built into LinkITone, so all the libraries we're going to use are already on the device! How lucky it is! Download the code file that is attached to this step. You want to find this line of code:LAudio.playFile (storageFlash,(char)RockinAroundXmasTree.mp3); See how he says: RockingAroundXmasTree.mp3? You're going to want to rename this to whatever your music file is called! Otherwise he won't play! XmasTreeMusicCreator.inoFind is a good place, probably for all the gifts for your speaker to sit safe and sound. Get the whole gang into the festive spirit with this device. At some point your whole family will rockin' around the Christmas tree! Tiny, evergreen sweets are the perfect toppers for these festive cupcakes. There are literally hundreds of Christmas-related compact albums and albums out there, so here's a holiday collection that shows back to the basics of a rendition of winter fireplace classics as well as a few basic listening soundtracks. Take a look: This is a classic soundtrack from a classic holiday television program. More of a Christmas mood piece than a collection of carols, this 1965 soundtrack includes the timeless Linus and Lucy, the introspective Christmas time here, and Guaraldi's unique look at the Christmas song, Greensleeves, and My Little Drum (or, Little Drummer Boy). This album is also considered one of the great jazz Christmas albums. Released in 1965, Fantasy Records, released in 1983, this CD depicts Raffi, who is already known as a great musical artist for children. It's no surprise that his warm, ordinary voice is welcome in this collection of familiar holiday songs, along with harder-to-find tunes like Roger Miller's Old Toy Trains, Arnold Sundgaard and Alec Wilder in Douglas Mountain, and Tex Logan's Christmas-time-Coming. Also included are several Raffi originals, like Every Little Desire, The Gift of a Love Child, and On Christmas Morning. Released in 1983, Shoreline Miller's 1961 album is one of the best carols to learn. Children and families will enjoy an enthusiastic, clearly articulate singing, and almost every great Christmas song is here! Released in 1961, Columbia Records Hip-O Records/Universal Music Enterprises is similar to Christmas classics, but with a focus on new tunes. Overlapping songs include Rudolph the Red-Foot Deer (Berl Ives here, Bing Crosby on classics), Frosty the Snowman (Jimmy Durante here, Gene Autry on the classics), and Jingle Bells (Ella Fitzgerald here, Bing Crosby and Sister Andrews on the classics). Both include Spike Jones All I Want for Christmas (these are my two front teeth). This album also includes Bobby Helms Jingle Bell Rock, Jackson 5 I Saw Mom Kissing Santa Claus, Brenda Lee Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree, Chipmunks Christmas Is Not Late, and Raoul Little Marshmallow World, best known for hearing on Phil Spector's 1963 masterpiece Christmas Gift for You. Released in 2007, Hip-O Records crank up the chipmunks and let Christmas begin! Ross Bagdasaryan and his chipmunks happily sing their way through 20 Christmas classics, adding their own brand of humor along the way. The tunes include Deck Halls, Silver Bells, It Starts to Look a Lot Like Christmas and Chipmunk Song (Christmas Not . Released in 1962, Capitol Records Has Another Excellent Christmas Soundtrack, but for a different reason: Boris Karloff tells stories The whole story is written by Dr. Seuss, and it may just be possible that it's more fun listening to Karloff's reading than watching an animated classic. The album includes music by Albert Hague and includes unforgettable You're a Mean One, By Mr. Grinch, performed by Thurl Ravenscroft, as well as two tunes sung by The Citizens of Whoville, Welcome Christmas and Trim Up The Tree. Released in 1966, Leo the Lion Records/MGM is a gentle version of 13 Christmas classics, with vocals by Tara McLean. The melodies are kept simple using the most basic musical accompaniment, including piano, acoustic guitar and acoustic bass. Just as great for singalongs or take a nap once. Released in 2005, Fisher-Price is similar to Holly Jolly Kids Christmas, but with a focus on old classics. Overlapping songs include Rudolph the Red-Foot Deer (Bing Crosby here, Burl Ives on Holly Jolly), Frosty the Snowman (Jean Autry here, Jimmy Durante on Holly Jolly), and Jingle Bells (a particular swingin' version of Bing Crosby and the Andrews Sisters here, Ella Fitzgerald on Holly Jolly). Both include Spike Jones All I Want for Christmas (these are my two front teeth). Here you also get Nat King Cole's Christmas song, Crosby and Fitzgerald's Silver Bells and Crosby and Sisters Andrews Twelve Days of Christmas. Released in 2001, Lifestyles Soundtrack, which accompanied the 1979 special television. Make sure you find a 13-track version (available in the form of a digital download on iTunes and Amazon), which includes Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas, Dr. Teeth and an electric version of Mayhem Little Saint Nick, and an introspective song When the River Meets the Sea, the song was originally written by Paul Williams for the 1977 HBO special emmet Otter's Jug-Band Christmas. Released in 1979, RCA Records you just have to turn on the soundtrack to what will turn out to be a modern holiday movie classic. The choice of song by director Jon Favreau makes this CD one of the most fun Christmas collections around, even if it includes non-holiday tunes such as Louis Prima's Pennies from Heaven and Billy Preston's Nothing Of Nothing. But you get amazing songs like zoe Deschanel and Leon Redbon in Baby It's Cold Outside, Eartha Kitt in Santa Baby, and two songs from Leon Redbon's 1987 album Christmas Island, Winter Wonderland and Christmas Island. Released in 2003, New Line Records Courtesy Rock Me Baby Records More E Street Band than public choir, Tallman's collection has a kind of Memphis RHR-meets-rockably sound. The CD contains a staggering 42 tracks, including songs, jokes, Merry Christmas greetings in several languages, and festive stories. You get a particularly rockin' version of Santa Claus coming into town and we need a little Christmas, Billy Preston-like God rest you gay gentlemen, and a great Celtic-scented version I've seen three ships. contains many familiar holiday hits, but also contains a harder to find as Christina Rossetti's 19th-century tune Love came down on Christmas Day and In Bleak Midwinter.
